Local Cabinet Companies Unite

Athens, Georgia, April 11, 2011-The Cabinet Man of Athens and Coleman Cabinets of Watkinsville have united to form Webber Coleman Woodworks in Watkinsville. By joining forces with a successful and established business, they are able to combine the expertise of Bill Claxton, former owner of Coleman Cabinets and Dan Webber, former owner of The Cabinet Man, share overhead costs and combine sales volume that will allow them to come out a stronger company and serve their clients better.

A small business owner never plans for the day they have to rebuild their business from a fire. What some may consider it devastation, Dan Webber, The Cabinet Man, considers it a blessing in disguise. "After the fire in November of 2010, we were so blessed and encouraged by the outpouring of support from the Oconee County community, local business owners, Chamber of Commerce and local government."

"I have had great respect for Bill Claxton for the years I have known him and observed his business and am excited about the opportunity to work with him." Dan Webber says. "It has been a pleasure working with the team of people at Coleman Cabinets and we are excited about the years to come." The team now also consists of Jessica Webber, the only certified designer (AKBD) through the National Kitchen and Bath Association in the Athens and surrounding area.

Webber Coleman Woodworks will continue to operate on the principles of the former businesses- striving to be the cabinet supplier of choice by excelling in the areas of timeliness, quality and service with integrity and honesty.

"We believe there is a bright future ahead of us," says Bill Claxton.
